Régi Nyomtatványok Tára kincseiből (Album from the Treasures of the Early Printed Books Collection) was published recently. Edited by Péter Ekler and Bernadett Varga and designed by typographer László Kiss, the representative volume gives a selection from the treasures of NSZL's Early Printed Books Collection, in which the diversity of centuries-old German-Hungarian relations is revealed. The "anthology" consisting of color reproductions of certain details of the selected works and of short text annotations includes well-known and less known, ornate and less attractive but all the more interesting chronicles, travel descriptions, travelogues, war reports, histories of countries, woodcuts, copperplates, religious reading materials and textbooks – beautiful examples of German-Hungarian interactions to be found in early printed books. Descriptions were made by Csilla Bíró, Péter Ekler, János Heltai, Csaba Péter Horváth, Györgyi Nagy, Klaudia Túri, Bernadett Varga, Judit P. Vásárhelyi and Ágnes W. Salgó, while the text was translated into German by Albrecht Friedrich.

[2]“The project, initiated by National Széchényi Library and supported by the Embassy of Germany in Budapest, documents rather expressively the vivid and centuries-old social contacts between the two nations.”

Dr. Heinz-Peter Behr, Ambassador of the Federal Republic of Germany in Hungary

“Since the Hungarians had settled in the Carpathian Basin and since the foundation of the Hungarian state, German-Hungarian political, economic and cultural relations have been one of the major external determining factors in the history of Hungary. We hope that this ornate volume presenting German-Hungarian relations will be a successful milestone of further cooperation opportunities.”

Dr. László Tüske, Director-General of National Széchényi Library
